Ballybrooney Flock

The Ballybrooney flock was established in 1986. The pedigree flock was initially developed with purchases of females and stock sires from leading Irish breeders. One of the most prolific ewe in terms of the number of female descendants currently in the flock, EWI 05 034, is descended from one of these foundation females. These bloodlines have been supplemented over the years with purchases of stock rams and females from Irish, Northern Irish and Scottish breeders. There are some ewes in this year's sale out of this line.

Many ewes that were sold from the flock have went on to breed exceptionally well for the purchasers. At the All Ireland Texel Championships this year 2012, the ram lamb champion was bred from a Ballybrooney ewe, purchased by Fergal O Sé. Two ewe lambs were sold that went on to win the champion hogget ewe and the second prized hogget ewe at the Texel All Ireland Championships 2011.
